Working in one of the most war-torn, conflict-ridden environments in the world MIAGE student, Dane Sawyer, put his graduate studies to use for a year, mid-program, to serve with the US Army in Afghanistan as a Civil-Affairs Officer. Recently returned, Dane will share his experiences serving as an intermediary between the Afghan people and the US military, acting as the subject matter expert on the complex human terrain system existing in Afghanistan, administering a micro-loan program, and working with organizations such as USAID, the US Department of State, US Treasury Representatives, USDA, and the Government of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan.
